Dear Parishioners

For more than 25 years Aras Mhuire Oratory in Shamble Lane has been an oasis of prayer and peace in the heart of Dungannon, where people have come before the Blessed Sacrament to glorify God in adoration and to lay before Him their cares and concerns. Countless people from this parish and beyond are to be complimented for their fidelity and commitment to this noble practice which is a precious part of our Catholic tradition.

On Wednesday, the feast of Saint Brigid, Aras Mhuire Oratory and Bookshop will reopen in new premises on Irish Street. Please God the enhanced beauty and dignity of this new location will generate renewed interest in Adoration and be an incentive for more people to come before the Lord in prayer.

Likewise, Aras Mhuire Bookshop has not only been an important outlet for religious goods and items of devotion, but a place of welcome, where Charlie McCall provided a listening ear and a kind heart to his many customers, who regarded him as 'a true gentleman'. Thankfully, that lovely ethos of warmth and respect is being maintained by Una McAlinden and Bernie Mulgrew, who are very pleased with the additional space and beautiful ambience of the new shop. I thank all who have been involved with the Bookshop and the Oratory over the years.

I want to compliment McKeown & Shields, the architects and I pay tribute to Felix Mullin, the main contractor, for a truly splendid job.

The new premises will be blessed at 12noon on Wednesday; hopefully, Archbishop Eamon will come for a formal opening in the near future. It is my prayer that Aras Mhuire will continue to be the "spiritual heartbeat" in Dungannon town for many years to come.

With every blessing, Colum Curry PP
